REPORT

Our college organized a group discussion on "Role of International-Law" on 11th March 2025. The discussion was commenced with welcoming the Principal Sir, HOD and faculty members. The student's coordinator anchored the program with faculty member. Many students participated in this discussion. Participants engaged in a dynamic conversation that covered various dimensions of international law, including its relevance in conflict resolution, human rights protection, and the governance of global issues such as trade, climate change, and humanitarian crises. The discussion began with an attempt to define international law. Participants emphasized that it comprises rules and principles that govern the conduct of states, international organizations, and, in some cases, individuals across national borders. One of the core topics discussed was the tension between state sovereignty and the authority of international law. Some participants argued that international law often challenges state sovereignty, particularly when it comes to enforcing norms regarding human rights violations or environmental protection. The discussion concluded with an acknowledgment that while international law is crucial in promoting peace, justice, and cooperation, its current framework requires continuous adaptation and improvement to meet the evolving challenges of the 21st century. Participants expressed a desire for further discussions and collaborations to explore how international law can be made more effective in addressing global issues.

REPORT

Our college organized a group discussion on "The Future of Constitutional Law" on 18th March 2025. The discussion was commenced with welcoming the Principal Sir, HOD and faculty members. The student's coordinator anchored the program with faculty member. The group discussion on the future of constitutional law aimed to explore how evolving societal, technological, and political trends will shape the development and interpretation of constitutional frameworks in the coming years. Participants engaged in a forward-looking conversation, focusing on potential challenges, the impact of globalization, the intersection with emerging technologies, and the adaptation of constitutional law to modern-day issues. The discussion began with a broad exploration of constitutional law as a living, breathing entity that adapts to meet the changing needs of society. Some participants emphasized that constitutions are not static documents but rather evolving instruments that must be interpreted and applied in response to shifts in social values, political structures, and global trends. A major portion of the discussion focused on the challenges and opportunities that emerging technologies present for constitutional law. Issues like data privacy, cyber security, and artificial intelligence (AI) were highlighted as areas where existing constitutional frameworks may need to evolve. The discussion concluded with a general sense of optimism about the future of constitutional law, acknowledging that while challenges abound, the dynamic nature of constitutional systems offers hope for continued progress in safeguarding democracy, human rights, and the rule of law. Participants agreed on the importance of continued dialogue and adaptation to ensure that constitutional law remains fit for the challenges of the 21st century.

REPORT

Our college organized a group discussion on "New Criminal Laws in India" on 20th March 2025. The discussion was commenced with welcoming the Principal Sir, HOD and faculty members. The student's coordinator anchored the program with faculty member. Many students participated in this discussion. The discussion started with a broad overview of existing criminal laws that is, the Indian Penal Code (IPC), Indian Evidence Act and Code of Criminal Procedure have cast a shadow over India's legal system. While these laws have been the foundation of our justice system, they have struggled to address the complexities of modern India. A new era has dawned and India has taken great steps towards evolution in the field of law with introduction of new criminal laws. Several participants highlighted that the transformative bills, named as Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita (BNS), Bharatiya Sakshya Adhiniyam (BSA) and Bharatiya Nagarik Suraksha Sanhita (BNSS) promise to bring about a rebirth by replacing these outdated and erstwhile statutes with new legal frameworks that are specifically designed for the needs of 21st century India. The discussion concluded with the analysis of the Bills reveals gaps and shortcomings that warrant attention. The exclusion of the erstwhile section 377 of the IPC by the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita (BNS) poses a gap, leaving no specific provision addressing the rape of an adult man. The proposed laws bring in offenses that are worded in a manner particularly concerning the states security. This could potentially result in over-criminalization and unclear legal provisions.
