Report

6 November 2025

Delhi College of Pharmacy conducted a Mock Interview Session on 6 November 2025 with the objective of improving students' employability and preparing them for professional recruitment processes. The activity provided students with practical exposure to the interview environment.

The session covered important aspects of interview preparation, including self-introduction, resume discussion, academic knowledge, career goals, interpersonal skills, and professional conduct. Students were encouraged to answer questions clearly, maintain appropriate body language, and demonstrate confidence while interacting with the interview panel.

The simulated interviews helped students understand the expectations of recruiters and recognize the importance of subject knowledge, communication, punctuality, and professional presentation. Constructive feedback was provided to help participants identify areas for improvement and develop more effective interview strategies.

The session also encouraged students to prepare systematically for placement opportunities and approach interviews with a positive attitude.

Overall, the activity was a valuable step towards career development and professional readiness. It helped students gain practical experience and understand the skills required to perform effectively in real interviews.

Report

8 July 2026

Delhi College of Pharmacy organized a Mock Interview and Placement Preparation Programme on 8 July 2026 to enhance students' professional competencies and prepare them for employment opportunities in the pharmaceutical and healthcare sectors.

The programme focused on interview techniques, resume preparation, self-introduction, communication skills, technical knowledge, and professional etiquette. Students were given an opportunity to practice answering interview questions in a simulated recruitment environment.

The interview exercises encouraged students to present their academic qualifications, explain their career aspirations, and demonstrate their understanding of pharmacy-related concepts. Particular emphasis was placed on confidence, clarity of expression, body language, problem-solving ability, and professional behaviour.

Participants received guidance on improving their interview responses and presenting themselves effectively before prospective employers. The programme also highlighted the importance of continuous learning, current pharmaceutical knowledge, and preparation for industry expectations.

The activity supported the college's efforts to strengthen students' employability and bridge the gap between academic learning and professional requirements.

The programme concluded with encouragement for students to continue developing their communication, technical, and interpersonal skills to improve their career prospects.
